Vermont Business Magazine is naming groSolar, a national leader in solar energy installation and distribution, as the first place 5x5x5 Growth Award winner in the technology category.

The award recognizes groSolar as the fastest growing technology company in Vermont.

This is the third win for the White River Jct. based company, which has seen a meteoric rise in the demand for alternative energy solutions nationwide.

"This award is a recognition of groSolar's leadership in solar energy market development, our state-of-the-art marketing, sales and installation techniques, and solid partnerships with our vendors and customers," said company co-founder and CEO, Jeff Wolfe. "Backing all this is our exceptional management team and employees, who all share the passion for installing as much solar as possible, profitably. The demand for energy independence across the country is stronger than ever before, and our staff is responding."
